Mr. Kissinger said that failure of the Western industrialized nations to agree on a unified posttion has delayed a meeting with the oil-producing countries. He said it was essential that voluntary curbs be placed on oil consumption to meet the problem of high petroleum prices.

They also will have to get approval when they have sold more than 100,000 tons of any commodity abroad during a week. Any changes in the destination of the shipment also will have to be approved.

Inflation Plagues Soviet Union Too Despite the Official Disclaimers

By Hedrick Smith

MOSCOW. Oct. 7 (NYT).-Officially, there is no inflation in the Soviet Union. Inflation is an economic cancer that supposedly grows only in an unhealthy capitalist environ-

The Soviet press has lately been driving home that point in harid detail, and one high official asserted that the Soviet retail price index had actually gone down three-tenths of 1 per cent since 1970. But ordinary Soviet citizens scoff or laugh at the official explanations and grown about higher prices on everything from food and clothing to cars, private housing, entertainment or tutoring their children for college-entrance examinations. What used to cost 5 rubles ($6.55) a few years ago, one middle-aged woman said, now costs 7 rubles. A linguist estimated that to feed and clothe her family of four is now twice as costly as it was in 1970. A nurse, more modestly, estimated

Citizens Estimate Rise at 20% to 100% Since 1970 the rise over the same period at 20 per cent.

"It's become so that almost on the side to make ends meet. commented an industrial systems analyst. "If you meet someone who really lives on his salary, he is a very poor person indeed. Fixed Prices .The highly publicized system of fixed prices on important staples in state stores and a deliberate suppression of information about price increases make it nearly impossible to produce anything comparable to the cost-of-living figures published monthly in the United

But there is little dispute among ordinary people that hidden inflation has been actively at work as wages, and savings. have risen in recent years, though by most accounts the inflation has not been as rampant as in many Western countries in the last year.

For a start, Soviet citizens enjoy a subsidized subway ride for 5 kopecks (about 6.5 cents) as they did 20 years ago. Rents in state housing are fixed and held very low-10 to 18 rubles monthly for a counie of rooms. A half-liter of milk costs, as it did a decade ago, 16 kopecks. Ordinary potatoes, when available, are still fixed at 10 kopecks a kilogram. The beef price ceiling in state stores is nominally unchanged at 2 rubles

But even with these and other fixed state prices, the hidden inflation of the Soviet retail market has worked inexorably in several ways-all reflecting the endemic shortages of an economy where supply of any desirable item cannot keep pace with rising demand or the increasing purchasing power of almost all segments of society. Sometimes state prices are increased outright, as last winter when the prices of such luxury items as carrier, smoked selmon. furs and jewelry were doubled overnight. More often, however, increases are thinly veiled in state outlets, or take place openly in the private farm markets or thriving black market. The favorite technique of Soviet industry, as in the West, is to introduce a new model or new variety of a standard item, assert that it has improvements, and raise the price much more than the improvements warrant. This affects everything, Russians say, from bread and butter to automobiles. The classic case this fall is the Soviet-built Flat-124, known here as the Zhiguli, which is giving way to the Flat-125, known as the improved Zhiguli. It has a slightly more powerful engine, a more attractive interior, a warning light on the door panel, more chrome and a few other changes. The price increase is one that would make Western auto makers envious: The older model costs 5,500 rubles and the new one costs 7,500 rubles-an increase of 36 per cent.

Four years ago the old and quality brands of vodks like Stolichnaya and Moskovskaya, priced at 3.12 rubles for half a liter, gradually began to disappear from shelves, and news vodkas were introduced for 3.62 rubles and 4.12 rubles-neither up to the quality of the older

"Vodka is a kind of currency in the Soviet Union," a man

"So, when it goes up, you know things are going up generally." The official explanation is that the price increases were intended to curb drinking. But they have had no such visible result.

Accusations Made

ficials have joined consumers

in accusing all kinds of consumer-goods enterprises of producing more expensive items-in an effort to fulfill their economic plans and simply discontinuing their cheaper ones. It is possible to manipulate

"A few years ago, we used to be able to get veal at 1.20 rubles a kilo," recalled a housewife. "Now it has simply disappeared. The first grade of beef is 2 rubles a kilo, as before, but before, it used to be worth it. Now it is 1 ruble worth of meat and 1 ruble of bones. "Or take chicken. We used to get young fryers for 1.15 rubles a kilo. The more expensive varieties were 1.75 and 2.65 a kilo. Now, the cheaper kind of fryers has disappeared and the 1.75 variety is hard to find. The choice now is mostly 2.65 a kilo or imported Hungartan or Danish chickens for 2.83 a kilo or, if you are des-Soviet publications and ofperate, 3.40 a kilo for cleaned chicken.

"That is the main means of inflation here. The cheapest varieties cannot be found at all Medium-price items are rare and the most expensive is what is offered. So the cost of living goes up even without changthe fixed price system, according prices," she said.

celebration of its October war "victory" over Israel a year ago moved into its third day today, with Egyptian leaders warning that a new round of fighting will be inevitable if current peace efforts lead nowhere.

Government officials said that they believe that unless tangible progress is made toward an Arab-Israeli peace settlement by the middle of next year, a new war could erupt.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is embarking on another Middle East tour this week to seek further progress toward a settlement. He is starting with Cairo, where he is due Wednes-

The officials said that Egypt was looking to the new Kissinger initiative for a breakthrough in a situation which has been almost static since military disengagement on the Syrian-Israeli front last June

In speeches in Cairo yesterday climaxing the October war anniversary festivities, War Minister Ahmed Ismail and Premier Abdel Hegazy left no doubt about Egypt's determination to fight again if necessary.

At a military parade, at which some of Egypt's most sophisticated weaponry was displayed, Marshai Ismail said, "From the first day of the cease-fire, we have been developing our armed forces, absorbing the lessons of the [October] war, training rigorously, replacing our losses and preparing the theater of operations for a new round of fighting to complete the mission of liberating every inch of our land."

Mr. Hegazy told a special par-liamentary session called to honor the armed forces: "Mobilization for battle remains a pressing and sacred duty."

The main event of today's festivities was a youth parade in-volving about 50,000 persons.

Economic questions, particularly energy, are expected to play a dominant role in the Ford-Giscard talks. The French have been hesitant to adopt too strong a stance against the oil producers and to participate in the international energy agency now being set up by 12 industrialized na-Washington has been stressing a firmer approach toward the oil-producing countries in order to combat further price increases. Defense questions, and the increasing talk of greater European defense cooperation, particularly between France and West Germany, were expected to be another topic. Despite Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's reluctance to visit Washington at this time, there are strong indications that he will soon accept an invitation to visit Boston for the 1976 celevration of the U.S. bicentennial. Gen James Gavin former U.S. ambassador to France, is expected here this week to invite him on behalf of the City of Boston, where an ances-tor of the French President playa role in the American Revolution.

Mr. Giscard d'Estaing aiready has indicated he might use the bicentennial as an occasion to visit America. Ironically, it was not at Boston but at Savannah. Ga., that Adm, Comte d'Estaing distinguished himself in August,

At Boston, the admiral came under criticism from the colonists for not landing his infantry or taking on Lord Howe's fleet offshore. When the French sailors later did go ashore they were set upon and beaten up, in the words of historian Samuel Eliot Morison, "by Sam Adam's roughnecks."

After Boston, Adm. d'Estaing was criticized by Pietre André Suffren, who served under him, as not having "seamanship to mense infusion of petroleumbased wealth.

As oil payments from the consumer nations cascade into the national bank at the rate of more than $1 billion a month quadrupling the estimated annual income, the new money is enabling Iran to rush toward the goal set by Shah Mohammed Reza Pahleyi—economic development within 25 years equal to that of a European country such as West

While there has been unmistakable economic progress in this country in the 10 months since the oil producers began to sharply raise their prices, the influx of the new money has also underscored and aggravated two of Iran's serious problems; rising in-flation and a dearth of trained manpower at virtually every level of the nation's economic life.

Diplomats who have been studying the Iranian economy tend to conclude that while this country has begun to improve economic conditions, the government's handling of the tremendous new wealth is shaky and tangible benefits to most of the nation's 33 million people seem to be more in the offing than in existence

The Tehran bureaucracy that is handling the distribution of the new wealth, the diplomats say, has not been able to stem inflation or plan a national manpower training program that will avoid the necessity—for years, if not decades—of importing tens of thousands of foreigners to do managerial skilled and possibly unskilled work

The official attitude toward such problems, expressed in statements by Premier Amir Abbas Hoveyda, is that the nation must patient while readjustment takes place in the economy.

The government has, in the view of the diplomats, taken a number of steps to improve Iran's financial situation. Among these are loans to foreign governments, including $1.2 billion to Britain, payment of international debts amounting to $1.7 billion this year, the accumulation of foreign exchange reserves of about $1 billion and the purchase of 25 per cent of the huge Krupp steel enterprise in West Germany.

But many Iranians seem to want to share the fruit of their country's oil wealth right now. Prices for staple foods, textile goods and home appliances have been soaring, in some cases to 100 per cent above last year's

Finance Study Ahroad

The seriousness of the manpower shortage is reflected in recent measures by the government. Because there are not adequate university and technical school facilities in the country, the government has decided to finance study abroad for virtually any student who will allow the government to approve his field of activity and agree to accept a government assignment on the completion of the academic work, To make sure they return home, some students are being compelled to post with the government a $10,000 bond. And the government recently announced that it would need to train more than half a million industrial workers in the next three years, To do this, the government proposes to spend about $750 for the training of each worker.

But analysts of the Iranian economy say that it is unlikely that the government will be able to staff its newly planned factories, hospitals and schools with natives. Foreign companies here are already signing contracts to provide managerial, engineering and technical personnel to go with the enterprises they are building. These foreigners are expected to swell the number of non-Iranians already working here by the tens of thousands. And it seems, the diplomats say, that many millions of dollars from Iran's new wealth will go into foreigners' pockets for many

Strategic Problems Forecast for Israel

By Drew Middleton

NEW YORK, Oct. 7 (NYT).-On the first anniversary of the October war, the consensus of U.S., British and Soviet experts that the long-term strategic balance in the Middle East is weighted against Israel.

This view, highly placed sources said, does not contradict a more optimistic assessment of Israel's position prepared by U.S. Intelligence for President Ford before his talks last month with Premier Yitzhak Rabin

That assessment dealt with the immediate military situation in terms of weapons and manpower. The long-term, pessimistic estimates take into account factors such as the vulnerability of Israel's oil stocks to missile attacks, signs that Egypt plans a blockade of the oil supply route through the Gulf of Aqaba and gaps in the Israeli officer corps. One Israeli advantage, Western sources agreed, is that the high command and the nation today have a more realistic attitude toward Arabs as soldiers than they did a year ago. The old attitude—"One Jew can whip 10 Arabs"-has been replaced by a higher appreciation of the courage and skill of the enemy.

Education a Factor Another plus for Israel is that although 45 per cent of its 1973 casualties were officers, the high level of national education enabled the armed forces to replace many of the junior officers with skilled noncommissioned officers. The first class of junior officers graduated last month from the Military Academy.

Against these immediate advantages are political and military considerations that underline

By Jim Hoagland

CAIRO, Oct. 7 (WP),-In another touch of personal diplomacy designed to please President Anwar Sadat, the United States is ceding property worth $1 million or more to Egypt so Mr. Sadat can build a Nile-side mansion in

The transfer of a 6,000-squaremeter plot of land owned by the U.S. government here follows a U.S. donation of $10 million to Egyptian pounds to Mrs. Sadat's favorite charity and former President Richard Nixon's gift of a $2-million helicopter to the Egyptian leader.

Egyptian-American diplomatic relations were restored in March after a break of seven years. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has emphasized in recent gatherings with Arab foreign ministers that personal relationships are important in his search for a Middle East peace settlement.

In theory, the Egyptian government, which stated its desire for the U.S.-owned land on April 24, could nationalize the property. But Egypt is busily wooing American investors and wishes to play down its history of land seques-

Israel's basic weakness over the next decade.

The country would rely at the start of a war, according to Mr. Rabin, on oil stocks within Israel and for replenishment on shipments by sea from Iran. This view strikes many U.S. and Western European experts as complacent. Granted a constant supply of oil from Iran which they do not consider a certainty, they raised two military points. First, could Israel protect its oll storage areas against Syrian and Egyptian surface-to-surface missiles, particularly the Soviet Scud with its 185-mile range? Second, could Egypt blockade the Gulf of Aqaba through which tankers from Iran would move to the port of Elath in southern Israel's most likely adversaries, Syria and Egypt, have an advan-tage of roughly 2 to 1 in immediately available manpower. In the past, Israel has been able to overcome this by the greater skill of its troops and a higher level of weaponry.

In the experts' opinion, Israel can no longer count on the "bullets for bodies" trade-off. It now faces forces whose arms are as sophisticated as its own, particularly in missiles and tanks.

The Soviet Union continues to nump arms into Syria. It takes onger, because of educational deficiencies, to train an Arab missile or tank crew, but the indications are that Syria has made steady progress in replacing its

Tax Resister In Denmark

Demonstrators Back Lawyer-Politician

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 7 (OPI)

The trial of millionaire tax lawyer Mogens Glistrup, one of Denmark's most successful politicians and a man who says he pays no taxes, opened today with demonstrations outside the court building

Mr. Glistrup, 48, is charged with more than 300 counts of tax evasion and fraud involving about four million kroner ($660,000). If found guilty he could be punished by up to 12 years' imprisonment, the loss of his seat in parliament and the right to practice law.

Outside the lower court a dozen young demonstrators from Mr. Glistrup's new Progress party carried banners and placards with slogans such as "Stop Gestapo Methods," "This Trial Is Public Persecution."

The moment the judge started to read the charges from a 400-page dossier, Mr. Glistrup settled down to read a book titled "The Tyranny of Our Institutions."

Mr. Glistrup has said that the trial is a public conspiracy against him and his party for its cam-paign against public expenditure and high taxes to finance the Danish welfare state Campaigning against "pen pushers and paper shufflers, Mr. Glis-trup's candidates won 28 seats in parliament in the last election and are the second biggest party. One of Denmark's most sought after tax lawyers, Mr. Glistrup said in a television interview four years ago that he paid no taxes despite a large personal income.

Fischer Defends His Chess Rule Demands

By Gordon T. Thompson

NEW YORK, Oct. 7 (NYT).-Bobby Fischer, the first American in modern history to win the world chess championship and the first player ever to resign it, has gone public in his own defense, angrily attacking critics of his demand for a change in the rules for a title match.

Now living in semi-seclusion in South Pasadena, Calif., Mr. Fischer-who has not played chess in public in more than two years—renounced his title June 29 after the International Chess Federation declined to adopt all the title-match conditions he sought.

While he and the federation had agreed that the winner of the match should be the first to win 10 games (instead of six, as under previous rules) and that draws not count in the scoring he also had asked that the match be declared over-with the champion keeping the title—in the event of a 9-9 tie. He further demanded that there be no limit on the number of games. His proposals came under heavy fire almost at once. Robert Byrne, chess columnist for The New York Times, called them "absolutely stark-naked cheating." Anatolwy Karpov, the 23-year-old Soviet player who is the odds-on favorite to be Mr. Fischer's challenger or successor, said in an interview with Izvestia that the terms were "imgentlemanly and

'An Awful Thing'

"To play until 10 victories is an awful thing," he said. "The match can last three or four months, and it is impossible to play chess so much; it will cease being an art and turn into forced labor."

In response to an inquiry, Mr. Pischer made available a copy of a letter he had written to Larry Evans, a columnist for Chess Life & Review magazine and a long-

'To Stop the Arms Race'

party should choose East Berlin as the site for another call to "stop the arms race and then go on to restrict armament" is not without its significance. The East German government has, from its inception, seemed to regard itself as the embattled bastion of Communism in Europe: Stalinist in mood if not in outward actions, and haunted by contrasts across the Berlin Wall. The moderation and the hope implicit in all that Leonid Brezhnev said in celebration of the 25th anniversary of that prickly regime derived added force from this contrast.

Whether the atmosphere created by Mr. Brezhnev can be crystallized into concrete improvement for a world that still lives uneasily on the slope of a nuclear volcano is another matter. When the Soviet and American will to create a genuinely global détente is placed upon the conference table in specific terms, acute problems immediately arise. The armament race is not yet ended, although beginnings have been made, and the danger of nuclear proliferationcompounding the threat of an eruptionhas actually increased.

The obstacles to agreement are real enough and do not have to be wholly ascribed to guile or intransigence. For example. Mr. Brezhnev's proposal for a mutual naval withdrawal by the United States and the Soviet Union from the Mediterranean is a plausible idea and one that might well give reassurance to many nations in that troubled area that they will not be the

That there are groups acting on Washington and Moscow to prevent or at least delay meaningful reductions in armaments is undeniable. In Moscow they are veiled by the Kremlin's walls; in Washington they find voice on Capitol Hill as well as in the Penta-There is the irony, for example, that reports indicate the Senate will not ratify the latest agreement on control of underground testing because some senators thought it did not go far enough while others felt it went too far.

Nevertheless, until and unless the two nuclear superpowers can make real progress toward diminishing the nuclear peril, the spread of knowledge of the use of fissionable materials—hastened by the energy crisis is likely to bring more shocks of the kind that India gave the world with its nuclear explosion. And once a large number of nations sit glaring at their rivals, with their hands on the trigger of their own nuclear "equalizers," no one will be even measurably safe. In a time of acute economic uncertainty, political uncertainties multiply. as President Ford and Mr. Kissinger have been pointing out. The basic answer to this, of course, is a restoration of economic order. But in the meanwhile, it is urgent to reduce the military perils of a politico-economic

The crisis in Italy that has followed the fall of the Rumor government is a symptom of a wider malaise that is rapidly overtaking the Western democracies in Europe.

The impact of a staggering increase in oil prices on top of already soaring inflation and rising deficus in payments abroad has sent governments reeling everywhere. Intensified almost beyond effective management now are problems that otherwise might have yielded in time to the normal "muddling through" for which Britain is famous and that democratic governments everywhere practice most of the time.

Each country in Europe has its own probiems. Britain is torn by a class-caste clash, an "us-against-them" psychology in the trade unions, that makes coherent economic policy virtually impossible. The continued bombings by Irish terrorists provide a macabre backdrop for the domestic political crisis

In Italy, there has been a virtual breakdown in government administration; the mail service, for example, is so unreliable that many companies have set up their own courier system for important communica-

Greece, emerging from seven years of military dictatorship, is listing toward the left. with a newly legalized Communist movement exerting increasing influence. In Portugal, after a longer period of authoritarianism, an even more pronounced leftward trend is in

Concern over such trends is aggravated by a growing feeling that expectations for improved relations between the Soviet Union and the United States may have been overly optimistic. Détente is in trouble over questions of trade as well as of Russian emigration policies.

West Germany, economically the healthiest contry on the Continent. with the lowest inflation-rate, is nevertheless troubled by recollections of two previous inflations that pauperized most citizens. Political scandals and the resignation of Chancellor Willy Brandt have left scars that trouble the nation's political calm.

Now, on top of all these national problems, a single overwhelming pressure, stemming from the weight of the extortionate oil price, is threatening every government.

More worrisome still than the current dangers—with declining growth rates, rising unemployment and a mounting atmosphere of social conflict almost everywhere - is the threat to the West's political fabric of a major depression that could well overtake the whole industrial world if the multiple economic and monetary problems remain un-

Secretary of State Kissinger reportedly has been evoking this danger in increasingly gloomy terms recently, recalling that the Great Depression of the 1930s brought Hitler to power and contributed to the origin of history's most destructive war. Another depression of this dimension could topple governments like saplings in a hurricane.

The major oil-consuming nations are uniting to form a counter-cartel to deal with the exorbitant demands of the oil-producing countries. But the vulnerability of the West Europeans and the Japanese, who depend on the Middle East for 80 per cent or more of their oil, makes them hesitate before American proposals of oil-import cutbacks and other measures that could set off a power struggle with the Arab states.

These hesitations are understandable. As President Ford addresses Congress today on the nation's economic problems, the world will listen for signs whether he has answers for his country's urgent problems. Unless the United States takes the lead with a coherent and comprehensive program of its own, the consequences for Western civilization may be dire.

A Year After the Mideast War

One year has now elapsed since the outbreak of the fourth Arab-Israeli war. It is an event whose dimensions have grown rather than diminished with the passage of time. It already seems likely that 1973 will be remembered by posterity as one of the key dates of the 20th century, the century in which the domination of the world by the people of European origin reached its zenith and went into steep decline. . . . If Israel is to exploit its short-term strength successfully, it must not be by war but by seeking Arab acceptance. Israel has a chance of obtaining that acceptance, but only if it returns most of the way toward its pre-June 1967 borders. Obviously a special status would be needed for Jerusalem. That would still leave a Jewish state much larger than the one envisaged by the United Nations in

Rockefeller: The Power of Money

By Anthony Lewis

BOSTON.—At the Senate hearings on Nelson Rockefeller's nomination for vice-president, there was a solemn discussion of whether his family's money gave it power. Rockefeller dismiss that notion as a "myth." He hoped it would be "exposed and dissipated."

It was a wonder that no senator laughed out loud, or alternatively cluiched his stomach. For no one needs to make subtle study of the Rockefeller holdings to find an attempt at influence, The family has spent millions in plain old cash money for the purpose of political power: to elect Nelson Rockefeller.

The last time he ran for governor, in 1970, he and his relatives reported spending $4.6 million on his campaign. The leading authority on American campaign finance, Herbert E. Alexander, estimates that the Rockefeller on his campaigns for governor and another $12 million on his tries for president in 1984 and 1968. In the use of one family's money for political power, there has probably been nothing like it in American history.

Promoted Himself

Nor is the campaign money all. Nelson Rockefeller made himself acceptable to the academic and iournalistic establishment by surrounding himself with a highlypaid staff of lawyers, eggheads and writers. He promoted himself through two costly commissions on "national goals" and "critical choices." And it worked. He would certainly never have made it so far on only his natural charm, brains, wink and grin. Now we discover that he was ctually buying political security. too, though of course in the most decorous way. In 1960 he lent $100,000 to the New York State Republican chairman. L. Judson Morhouse to buy some real estate on Long Rockefeller's spoke explained that the chairman's job was unsalaried and the governor wanted him to have some income so he would be less subject "to emptation." Rockefeller also gave $50,000 to Henry Klasinger three days before the Nixon administration took office in 1969, and an unspecified amount to William J. Ronan chairman of the New York Port Authority. The spokesman said the latter gift was motivated by "friendship and the governor's desire to help keep a good man in government." All this has come out into the open only because the Senate committee demanded and got Rockefeller's

Richard Nixon nearly had to leave the ticket in 1952 when it was found that a number of businessmen contributed to a fund to supplement his public salary. With many contributors, improper influence might be hard to find. But it is surely much more dangerous, and a clearer violation of principle, to have a single immensely rich man giving large sums of money to key officials,

The lack of public interest in Rockefeller's nomination for vicepresident has been rather odd all along. After Watergate, one would have thought that the necessary symbols for high national office were candor, courage and respect for law. Rockefeller's record and character are to the contrary.

Political Tool

Law has been treated by Rockefeller as an instrumental tool of politics. He kept proposing welfare residence rules after the Supreme Court had held them appealed to the voters mood. Politics also underlay his tremendous campaign for a drug law whose irrational savagery probably exceeded anything in Anglo-American practice since the hor-rors described by Dickens; even in amended form, with automatic life instead of death sentences the law has been held unconstitutional by one New York court. At Attica, he refused to make the trip to the prison, believing that those on the scene could avert slaughter. To this day he has not had the honor or the decency to admit what happened afterward: the killing of 39 per-

unaware of the importance of finding new institutional arrangements to grapple with the new problems and the UN family has been studying these aspects. In fact the latest of such proposals to come to fruition has been the setting up of the Ministerial Committee of 20 by the IMT to look into the problem. Efforts are under way in GATT to form what is called a bureau to deal at a high level with questions pertaining to trade UNCTAD in the meanwhile has initiated moves to study the possibility of setting up a comprehensive international trade organization All these efforts and similar ideas are commendable steps and deserve support but unfortunately all of them miss the whole point of the exercise and that is finding a competent international forum to deal with the problems of trade, financing and development in an integrated manner for it is only through recognizing the interdependence of these problems that one can start tackling the problems that beset the world community and not through piecemeal approaches that tackle one problem to the detriment of others,

But aside from that record, there is the inescapable question of money. As a symbol of America's values it is bad enough that its laws allow one man to inherit hundreds of millions and, sometimes, to pay no income tax. It would be scandalous if Congress did not carefully consider the effect of making a man with such economic power vice-president and very possibly the 1975 presidential nominee. What an irony it would be if, after Watergate, we let someone who has abused the power of money and politics so grossly slip into our highest office.

Kissinger's Woes

Puzzle for the Kreml

By Victor Zorza

WASHINGTON.—The spate of negotiator, but actually to reports that Mr. Eissinger mit Mr. Ford publicly to r is in deep trouble has evidently reached the Eremin. The discreet inquiries which some of its rder have been making around town suggest that the Eremlin is worsied—and that it has asked its own experts for an assessment of Kissinger's chances of staying in office.

The report they would send home would presumably use the skills of Krembiology to the extent that they are applicable to Washingtonology - an exercise which has aroused Klasinger's tre once before. It is therefore only fair to warn the reader that he does not regard the practice as legitimate.

Two years ago, following a realtdown in the Paris talks on Vietnam, there were signs of a threat to Kissinger's position in the Nixon White House, When this column concluded that his position had been weakened, he complained that the publication of such articles in The Washington Post tended to undermine his credibility as a negotiator with the North Vietnamese, thus making it more difficult to bring about a peace settlement,

Content Analysis

The analysis of Kissinger's position rested in part on the use of such "Kremlinological" tools as content analysis. At the first of two press conferences, before the crisis, he had barely mentioned the President. At the second, he referred to Mr. Nixon 14 times. His aides retorted that such word-counting might mean something in Moscow, but not in Washington. But we now know that Nixon's press secretary, Ron Ziegler, complained that Kissinger had mentioned the President "only" twice After that, Kissinger, feeling himself vulnerable, over-corrected for his

It is from crumbs such as these that analysis in both Moscow and Washington must draw their conclusions about what happens in the innermost councils of government. No one really knows what want on between Kissinger and Nixon, just as no one knows President Ford's real feelings

Thus, when Mr. Ford made in his recent UN speech an extraordinary profession of confidence in Klesinger, this was generally regarded as a reflection of the President's own anger at the rumors than rife about a Ford-Kissinger rift, But it is now being suggested by some Washington officials that it was Kissinger himself who had asked Ford to make the statement, ostensibly on the familiar ground that the rumors ger and thus to silence hi miss in the White House, One of the bazards of

Oil and Food, Goose and Gand

By M. T. Mehdi

NEW YORK.—Apparently the Arabs and other oil producers are expected to behave in a way that America has hardly ever behaved.

That conclusion is drawn from threats to the oil-producing countries by President Ford and Henry A Kissinger, and from the applause they received in a New York Times editorial. The fact is that the producing countries are capitalists, commit-ted to the laws of supply and demand. The United States should be the last country to urge them to act differently! What is good for the goose is good for the gander-or has that been changed? In his speech before the UN

General Assembly, Mr. Kissinger advanced the theory that where-as food prices were fixed on the basis of economic factors, prices were artificially fixed by But we know, and Mr. Kissinger should know, that Congress has regulated American agriculture on the basis of political decisions.

Feed the World There is sufficient land in the United States that could feed the world for many years if it were not for political decisions to limit production and keep prices high. The Arabs and other oil producers are doing with their oil exactly what America has been doing with its food and agricultural products.

To be sure, the Arabs' decision on limiting oil production and raising the price, and their embargo last year, were both eco-nomic and political. Oil is the Arabe most important natural resource: it would be foolish for them to produce quantities larger than the market's demand and thereby lower prices and exhaust their natural wealth. If the producers keep the oil in the ground to meet future demands of the world market, oil will become more valuable; however, if they produce it to accumulate dollars, the dollars they pile up will with time become less valuable because of inflation.

Sound Decisions

These are sound economic decisions and ressonable indeed. Yet President Ford and Secretary Kissinger, who warned that contimed high prices involved the risk of a world depression, expect the Arabs and other oil producers to behave irrationally—to exhaust their natural resources and accumulate billions of dollars that they do not need at present and that will diminish in value. As for the high prices, the strange thing is not that the producing countries have raised the price of oil but rather that was not done 20 or 30 years

During this long period and even up to the present, the oil companies, acting as the middlemen, have been reaping huge profits for which both the producing countries and consumers

When the Arabian American Oil Co. (Aramco) is finally and fully owned by Saudi Arabia the price of oil will substantially go down as this greedy middleman disappears and oil flows directly from producers to con-

Politically, the Arab decision as expressed in the oil embargo must be understood as a selfdefense measure. In October, 1973, the United States arlifted and shipped to Israel over 52,000 tons of war materiel to enable the Israelis to hold on to oc-cupied Arab lands of Palestine, Egypt and Syria, and if need be to kill an inevitable part of the process—Arabs.

The oil embargo was s of self-defense, not blackmi was a political decision sought to persuade Am politicians to stop supplying with arms and stop killing and occupying Arab land

The news media and Mr singer, who enjoys a good have made much of the gagement agreements b Egypt and Israel and Syr Israel. But the issue is no nor the Golan Heights; th is Palestine. And Mr. Kit who recognized the Viet C the first step toward pe Vietnam, has failed so recognize the Palestinians primary party in the Arab conflict.

French Court Asked to Clear Jews in Christ's Crucifixion

TROYES, France, Oct. 7 (AP). -Jacques Isorni, one of France's foremost attorneys and legal historians, asked a district court today to fix the blame for the crucifizion of Jesus on Pontius Pilate, the Roman governor of Judea, and thereby absolve the Jewish people from collective guilt for Christ's death

Mr. Isorni appeared before Judge Pierre Bondouaire in his libel suit against the Rev. Georges de Nantes, 50-year-old leader of an ultraconservative splinter group in the French Catholic Church. Judge Bondouaire adjourned the hearing until Oct. 21.

Father de Nantes was present in the packed courtroom but did not speak. His defense is to be presented at the next hearing. The case arose out of a book

Mr. Isorni published in 1967 entitled "The True Trial of Jesus." On the basis of legal and historical research, Mr. Isorni maintained that Jesus was condemned and crucified under Roman law as an alleged leader of the guerrilla war against the Roman occupation and not because he claimed to be the Son of God. The book asserted that the Jews never accepted Jesus's claim to divinity and regarded him as an impostor.

Attacked in Article

In an article published seven years later, Father de Nantes attacked Mr. Isorni and the book. He accused the attorney of "falsifying the New Testament" in order to clear the Jews of their 'guilt" in the death of Christ. "I will not say that Isorni is an agent of Israel in the church," Father de Nantes wrote, "but I say nonetheless that in this great eternal trial of the Jews against Jesus and the church against the Jews, he opted for the Jews and against their victim." Mr. Isorni read this passage master in the revolution and construction and enhancing the role as a master are integrated with each other but have different aspects. You may say that the independent stand concerns how to detend the right at the master and discharge the responsibility as such, whereas the creative stand concerns how to heighten the role of the people, the monters, in remaking nature and reconstructing society. In other words, the independent stand is the fundamental stand which we must maintain in the revolution and construction, and the creative stand is the fundamental method that we must apply in transforming noture and society.

What is most important in adhering to the independent sland is to firmly quarantee in-Independence is what keeps man alive. If he loses indepenpression. We are fighting against dence in society, he cannot be called a man; he differs little from an animal. We can say that socio-political life is more valuable than physical life to a man, a social being. If he is forsaken by society and deprived of political independence, though he is alive, he is virtually dead as a social human being. That is why the revolutionaries deem it for more honourable to die in the haht for freedom than to keep themselves alive in slavery. Importing independence is tomtomount to ignoring man himself. Who likes to live shackled to ethers? Why did people light to overthrow the feudal system in ionner days and why are the working class lighting against the capitalist system today? Needless to say, the toiling pecple wanted to extricate themselves out of feudal slavery and they want to free themselves from capitalist exploitation and op-imperialism in order to liberate our nation completely from its yoke and enable it to enjoy freedom as a sovereign nation. In a word, all the revolutionary struggles are to attain freedom from either class or national subjugation; they are struggles of the people to defend their independence. Our struggle for the building of socialism and communism, too, is, in the long run, to enable the people to extricate themselves from all sorts of subingation and lead independent and creative lives as masters of nature and society.

In order to become the master of its own destiny, a nation must have an independent government and firmly quarantee politiand independence. This is why the Jucke idea should first be embodied as the principle of dependence in politics.

In order to guarantee solid independence in politics, must have one's own guiding idea and the capacity for icr mulating all policies and lines solely in the interests of one's dirw viumainee in bno elecae the specific conditions of ones country according to one's own iudquent. The government that arts under the pressure or ::structions of others connot be called a genuine people's gaverament responsible for the destiny of the people A country with this sort of government con not be regarded as an independent. sovereign state

The principle of independence in politics demands complete equality and mutual respect among all nations. It opposes being subjugated by others and subjugating others. A nation that subjugates others can never be free itself. In order to strengthen independence of the country, it is essential to strengther reliance in the economy along with political independence. Without self-reliance in the economy, it is impossible to meet the people's growing material demands and materially quarontee them the stand as the master of the state and society. Economic dependence on others connot guarantee political independence and without independent economic power it is impossible to carry through the line self-defence in national Self-defence and self-protection is the intrinsic nature of man. The country must also have means to defend itself. The line of self-defence in national delence is the essential requirement of an independent and sovereign state. Since there still remain imperialist aggressors the state that has not its own defence power to protect its sovereignty against the internal and external enemies is, in fact, not a fully independent and sovereign state.

The correctness and vitality of our Party's consistent line of independence in politics, self-relicace in the economy and selidefence in national defence has long since been proved by our people through their revolutionary practices.

WASHINGTON (NYT). - No less than artists or works of art, collections, too, acquire their aura of legend, mystery and scandal. This was certainly the case with the collection of Joseph Hirshhorn. Long before it was offered as a gift to the nation, this vast repository of modern painting and sculpture was talked about, joked about, attacked, defended and otherwise dilated both in and out of the parochial

Yet a certain frustration surrounded all this discussion. Except for Mr. Hirshhorn and his long-time curator and collaborator. Abram Lerner, no one could say for certain exactly what the collection consisted of. It was known to be very farge, but its sheer size was not universally regarded as a virtue. Could anything so big really be very good? It was known to contain some

People who had never seen the bulk of the collection somehow felt free to hold strong opinions about its quality and disposition. With the opening of the Joseph H. Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, all of this uninformed carping—the apocryphal anecdotes, the condescending criticisms and the general gossipmongering—can now be consigned to the oblivion it so richly deserves. The private collection has become a public collection. It belongs to a new national a museum devoted to the achievements of modern art -and for its inaugural exhibition last week, Mr. Lerner, now installed as director, has filled the galleries and the garden with 850 works selected from a total of sented in remarkable depth. There are whole anthologies of the works of Rodin and Matisse and Henry Moore, of Medarlo Rosso and Elie Nadelman and Raymond Duchamp-Villon, And along with this massive representation of the major figures, there are excellent examples of virtually every notahle sculptor of the period, whether evant-garde or academic. Offhand, the only significant omission seems to be the work of Claes Oldenberg.

Essential for Study

The sculpture collection sets a very high standard and the painting collection does not really meet it. In some respects, moreover, the installation of the exhibition tends to underscore the es rather than the strengths of the painting collection. Paintings are installed in more or less chronological order and a good many minor paintings -not to mention some of only the most marginal interest—are made to serve in lieu of the missing

This is not to say that the collection is entirely lacking in pictures of considerable importance. The constellation of paintings by Thomas Eakins, the greatest of American realists in the 19th century, is fairly staggering, and it is augmented by six sculptures by the same artist. The early years of the modern movement in America are beautifully documented and the American works are supplemented by certain European paintings by Munch, Kokoschka and Delaunay, among others—that are very fine

Willem de Kooning is another of the major American painters represented by an entire constellation of pictures—nine in all -but again, since they are split into periods, they do not have quite the effect of the Eakins group. Indeed, the finest of De Kooning's early pictures are made to suffer the indignity of hanging in the same gallery with some of the most insue paintings of Philip Evergood. This is the kind of juxtaposition that seriously weakens many sections of the inaugural exhibition.

But there are also entire galleries that make a marvelously strong and vibrant impression. Although Mr. Hirshhorn was a latecomer to the American abstract expressionists, he has nonetheless managed to acquire some of the major works of this school—the paintings by Clifford Still and Ad Reinhardt are especially notable—and he has been very attentive indeed to the accomplishments of the American color-field painters. Abstract painting of the 1960s is, therefore, represented here in force.

The shy eagerness of the student was nicely conveyed by Maria Ruberto, but Harvey Solin made less of the peacock vanity and feckless intellectualism of project—the Agnes de Mille Heri-tage Dance Theater. The new using black dancers in a ranking company. Two years later her "Rodeo," with the music of Aaron troupe of 25 dancers, together with a country fiddler and a pair of singers, made its Washington debut last week at Lisner Auditorium in a special "preview" pre-sentation featuring De Mille herself and guest soloist Gemze de appe, who danced in the original "Oklahoma!" production. De Mille's latest enterprise marks the first wholesale attempt to do for America's popular dance legacy what such celebrated out-fits as Russia's Moiseyev company have done for other native traditions. If anyone can make a go of it, it would have to be this feisty, sharpwitted dynamo of dance.

Taking Shape

The idea for the company had been taking shape in De Milie's imagination for a long time, but the troupe was only formed two years ago, and successfully launched at Winston-Salem in the spring of 1973. Since then, it has undertaken several tours of the South, Southwest and Midwest in the United States.

"I wanted to do it for years and years and years," she said in a recent interview, "but there was never enough money. People in this country don't realize what it takes. It's not like Russia, where the entire resources of the Soviet Union are at the disposal of dance. They've got schools all over the place, big schools, bush-league schools, and every time a every piece of embroidery and local color for 500 miles descends on them."

Eventually, the Rockefeller Foundation, the National Endowment for the Arts and others chipped in to bring the Agnes De Mille Heritage - Dance - Theater into existence.

But the fiscal sledding has been uphill, and only someone of De Mille's rocky constitution could have seen it through this far. In her recent memoir, "Speak to Me, Dance with Me," she recalled of her earlier days that "I came to be known on Broadway as a terror, a really tough, intransig

Company's Name

The name of the company leaves room for the broadest spectrum of dance types, and in Indian dances of pre-Colonial times through the various shades of folk, regional, social, popular and theatrical dancing right up to the rock era.

Collecting and anthenticating these dances was no easy task. "Fortunately," De Mille relates, "Tve always kept my notes, even from my student days, and boy, did they come in handy. But a lot more research is needed. So much has been bowdlerized over the years. If I had the time and the money, I'd really like to scour the country and look for original materials."

The present company repertoire includes folk and historical dances arranged by De Mille, as well as ballets reflective of American themes by herself, Katherine Dunham and Anna Sokolow. Given additional funding, she'd like to acquire or commission more work by other choreog-raphers, strengthen the troups itself, and "buy new shoes."

At a Lecture

At a lecture at the Kennedy Center recently, De Mille aston-ished her audience by strutting, mugging, wriggling and dencing her way through an "illustrated," whirlwind survey of the Ameri-can dance heritage. The account was further enlivened t personal reminiscences. 'I once won a waltz contest wit Jacob Javits as my partner," al said. "That was before he be came so awesome."

At another point, she recall asking Francis Biddle, the form U.S. attorney general, wheth Isadora Duncan was really t she was cracked up to be. "O my dear," he told her, "it's wor being old now to have been your when she danced."

Where the future of the ne company is concerned, De Mi is a name-dropper in the rever of the usual sense. For the tin being, she's content to let fledgling endeavor gain whater mileage it can from her person renown. But only temporarily. want to drop my name from its soon as I can, as soon as it's it sible," she says. "I'd really it to see it called the America Heritage Dance Theater."

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Citroën-Peugeot Talks Hit Snag

Talks between Peugeot, Michelin and Citroën aimed at linking Citroën's car subsidiary to Peugeot are meeting difficulties over valuation of the Citroën unit's assets, industry sources say. The three firms amounced in July they would study plans for regrouping Citroën and Peugeot. The problem of how much Peugeot should pay if it agrees to take over part of Michelin's 59 per cent stake in Citroën is causing greater difficulties in the discussions than the question of how Citroen's current financial losses should be written off, the sources report. Citroën is facing a 1974 balance-sheet loss of about 850 million francs ($130 million) as a result of poor sales. Agreement on cover for Citroen's 1974 deficit from Michelin and Peugeot and possible capital market borrowings will be easier once the issue of the firm's value has been resolved, the sources say.

AMC Raises Its Prices

American Motors Corp. says the suggested retail prices for its 1975 cars and jeeps will show a $330, or 8.5 per cent, increase over comparable 1974 models. This is slightly higher than the tentative increase AMC announced last month of $300, or 7.7 per cent. The new raise follows settlement of a three-week strike by AMC's 15.000 auto workers in the United States and Canada. Agreement was reached on a new contract which calls for an increase of nearly 30 cents an hour.

Toyo Studies Further Cutbacks Toyo Kegyo is studying plans to further reduce auto production for the six months ending April 30. The plans now under study are necessary to help the company over the present slowdown in domestic demand and export sales, the company says. Toyo orginally aimed to produce 380,000 units, including 220,000 for export, in the six months ending Oct. 31, the same as production in the previous six months. This target was later revised to 360,000 units to reduce higher inventories, centered on rotary-

Last spring, Capitalfin bought about one million Signal shares from the Cemp investments group in Montreal, giving it the largest block of Signal stock.

Russian-Japanese Steel Mill Seen

The Soviet Union is reportedly planning to build a $3-billion integrated steel plant in Siberia with Japanese cooperation. Quoting financial circles, the Asahi Shimbun newspaper, of Tokyo, says the project, which calls for an annual capacity of 3 million metric tons of steel, will be discussed at a meeting of the Japan-Soviet Economic Committee in Moscow on Oct. 29. The paper says the plant may be built either in Syobodny near the Sino-Soviet border or at Belgageg... near a coal mining deposit in south-ern Siberia to be developed jointly by Japan and the Soviet Union.

The new material is a composite of teflon and carbon fibers woven together in a special way to give it its porous, sponge-like structure. Smithkline said five years of animal studies and four years of use in humans show the material to be completely mert so that the body neither absorbs it nor reacts to it.

Proplast, the company said, has been used successfully by surgeons in building up bony structures in the body. Plastic surgeons, for example, have used it to help rebuild or repair bone defects in the face, including a case of restoring a jaw damaged in a shooting accident.

Another use has been in percons who have lost their teeth and have started to resorb the bony ridge that supports their dentures. This creates a difficult problem of getting dentures to fit. Proplast has been used to rebuild the ridge. The material becomes firmly anchored in five or six weeks as the underlying tissue grows into it and new dentures can then be fitted.

Smithkline said the material can be bonded to metal and so can be used to coat artificial parts implanted in the body, Experiments indicate this may be a way of holding these artificial parts in place since surrounding tissues will grow into the layer of Proplast. Currently, such prostheses as artificial hips have to be cemented in place with

U.S. Steel Firms Won't Ask New Limit on Imports

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (Reuters.—The American steel indus-try will forgo an attempt to rethe voluntary agreement with Japan and European steel makers to limit sales to the United States, an industry spokesman said today.

Frederick Jaicks, chairman of the American Iron and Steel Institute, said that the industry would not seek an extension of the voluntary agreement which expires at the end of this year. He told the congressional Economic Committee that the industry is seeking instead protection from steel dumping as part of the pending trade bill now in the Senate Pinance Committee The voluntary agreement dates back to 1968 and was negotlated by the U.S. government and Japanese and European steel makers to limit tonnage into the United States.

In the last year, however, foreign steel prices have outpaced U.S. steel prices Mr. Jaicks told the committee that the industry now wants better safeguards against dumping of steel through the trade legislation.

In Chicago, wheat futures prices fell sharply to close off 20 cents a bushel—the maximum permitted limit losses for the day—as President Ford's cancellation of the Soviet grain deal encouraged massive selling incentives across the board.

Corn futures fell the permitted amount of 10 cents a bushel, ending with a surplus of sellers. The halting of the grain shipments affected trading.

Many U.S. Concerns Adopting LIFO System of Accounting

NEW YORK, Oct. 7 (AP-DJ). -More and more U.S. companies are adopting the Last-In-First-Out system of inventory accounting in order to neutralize the impact of inflation on their financial statements. But the LIFO system also can have a dramatic downward impact on profits.

LIFO is a method of inventory valuation under which the cost of goods sold is based on the most recent prices for raw materials and other inventory items. thus reducing the ballooning effect that inflation has on profits.

gained as bullion prices climbed Critics argue that the two in-The American Stock Exchange ventory-accounting methods that have predominated in recent Most active was Heitman Mortyears—First-In-First-Out (FIFO) gage. 4, up 3/4, on volume of 114,100 shares. and average cost—tend to under-state costs because inventories are valued at their older, cheaper prices. In inflationary times, FIFO and average-cost accounting produce higher profits.

At least a score of companies, including Eastman Kodak, Du Pont and Firestone Tire & Rubber, have announced switches to LIFO from other inventory-accounting methods in recent weeks.

The tax partner of one major accounting firm says that up to 200 of his firm's clients are considering switching to LIFO, including 30 Big Board companies. Other sources indicate that at least 100 of the country's largest companies are considering the move, although many will not switch until year-end.

Earnings Reduced

The change in accounting can sharply reduce profits. Du Pont, for example, estimates that its shift to LIFO from the averagecost system for domestic inventories will reduce 1974 pre-tax earnings by about $300 million. Du Pont's 1973 pre-tax earnings were $1.04 billion.

Because of the negative impact on earnings. LTFO conversions have not always been welcome news to the stock market. But, says Thomas Holton, a partner in the accounting firm of Peat, Marwich, Mitchell & Co., "I suspect a lot of changes to LIFO are being made this year because the stock market is terrible anyway."

And a switch to LIFO carries an important benefit. It increases the cash available to a company; lower reported profits, after all. generally mean lower taxes, at least in the current year.

Du Pont, for example, will be paying about $150 million less in taxes this year: Firestone sets the savings at about $46 million. Such funds will be available for capital spending and other corporate purposes-including the purchase of raw materials at higher prices. In a time of tight money, that is no small con-Some Don't Want It LIFO is not for everybody, however. Many companies with a high rate of inventory turnover would not benefit much from LIFO because their costs are closely matched to income any-Few companies use LIFO for their operations abroad; many major industrialized nations simply do not permit its use and regulations governing LIFO in other countries would make a switch difficult.

The American Institute of Certified Public Accountants says that in 1955 about 200 of 600 large companies that the institute studies on a continuing basis used LIFO inventory accounting. During the 1960s, however, the number of LIFO companies declined, reaching 150 in 1972.

According to a study by Gary Schieneman of Arthur Young & Co., the accounting firm, 262 of the 2,600 Big Board and American Stock Exchange companies were using LIFO at the end of 1973. Nearly 20 per cent of those had changed to LIFO during 1973 itself.

It has been calculated that on current trends, the oilproducing states of the Middle East will have foreign currency reserves approaching those of the USA within a few years. And it doesn't take an economic genius to work out that they'll be transformed into one of the richest overseas markets for British exports in the world. Provided, that is, that British industry is quick off the mark when it comes to spotting new opportunities. And that's where the National and Grindlays Bank

Group can belp. Because there are Grindlays branches and offices right there on the spot - in increasing numbers. All ready to provide market information, introductions to potential customers and help with the legal and administrative side of exporting, at the drop of a phone call or cable. The Middle East is only one of the areas in which the Grindlays Bank Group provide a range of financial services to international business - from merchant banking to shipping finance, and from market information to high-level contact. Please call them, and find out more. It could just be the most profitable contact of your life.

CGE: a worldwide group and its highlights

A worldwide group CGE is France's leading electrical concern, with 160 plants, 60 overseas and foreign subsidianes and 127,000 employees. CGE is active in the following industrial sectors:

Heavy electrical engineering Construction and electrical contracting. 25% Telecommunications and electronics Cables, batteries and dry cells, special materials and home appliances.

Highlights Consolidated turnover excluding tax:

Orders received, excluding tax: S 3,000 million. Consolidated Cash flow: $ 12,9 million.

$ 2,740 million.

Consolidated investment: $ 123 million Consolidated earnings:$ 40 million.

CGE's recent highlights

Off to a good start in the nuclear field; orders received total §1,500 million.
Eight boiling water reactor (BWR) boilers under General Electric license, twenty two 1000 MW furbo-generalors, for nuclear reactors. Five new subsidiaries:
Cegelec Batteries, in Canada
Gulton Battery Corp. In the United States.
NSA in Graff Britain.
GSI Europe founded by the Services Informatiques

Gai subsidiary. In France, CETAG, jointly formed by General Elec-tric and Alsthom (55 %), a worldwide subsidiary formed in order to design and produce high-power gas turbine rotors. New agreements:

 Cooperation between Alsthom-Savoisienne and italitratro concerning transformers up to 1.200 MVA. Collaboration between Stein Industrie and Department of Atomic Energy (government of India), concerning last-breeder steam generators.

 Manufacturing license agreement for hydraulic turbines, between Alsthorn Neyrpic and Marine Industry Canada.
 Cooperation between CIT-Alcatel and Plessey Telecommunications Ltd., concerning electronic telephone switching suctems. telephone switching systems.

FACING UP TO THE ENERGY

1973 was CGE's 75th anniversary. But it was also a turning point, for the world was suddenly brought to a new consciousness. Oil prices shot up dramatically.

All the countries affected adopted somewhat

All the columns affected adopted somewhat similar strategies in response. These are founded on three main lines of attack-three development priorities; nuclear power, telecommunications and public transportation.

Precisely those fields in which CGE has been concentrating its efforts lover the past 15 years, increasing its research and development capacity. "The overall picture of our efforts to-date emerges as highly positive" said the Chairman, Ambroise ROUX, at the CGE Annual General Meeting, June 19th 1974.

Nuclear power 🦃

CGE's growing power.
France has decided upon the rapid and massive development of its nuclear power programmes. Looking towards the year 2,000, this programme provides for between one hundred and fifty and two hundred 1,000 MW reactors, based on two different techniques. Today, CGE is tooling up to meet these gigantic new requirements:

 four, and subsequently six nuclear reactors makers. CGE is developing newfamilies of generators, year to be produced by Alsthom, and six 1,000 MW turbo-alternators a year. CGE also occupies a leading position in the construction of Phenix-type (ast neutron breeders.

Telecommunications ) ( French telephone production grows 30 % each year. For CGE, through its subsidiary CIT-Alcatel, this amounts to the construction of rather more than one additional production plant every year. Time-division switching, in which CGE is a firm believer, is now beginning to fulfill its promise, in Poland, Mexico, Sytia and Morocco.

Transportation Priority to public transportation.

Priority to electrically powered systems
 The pace of development of public transport is about to accelerate, is already accelerating in the world's major countries. So many opportunities, patiently prepared for by CGE.

- Underground city transportation. The Group is involved in the construction of bridges and tunnels, rolling stock and system's control for the Lyons, Marseilles, Mexico City, Santiago of Chite, Rio de Janeiro metros, as well as the extension of the Paris metro. 2 - High speed trains

French high-speed normal track transport technique, developed by Alsthorn. In 1973, the TGV 001 pro-totype reached speed of 318 km/h. First likely market: the doubling of the Paris-Lyons line. Alsthorn is the world's third largest exporter of electric locomotives and the leading constructor of overhead contact locomotives.

3 - The electric car

Research and development 2 CGE devotes 4.3 % of consolidated turnover to R&D.

Work in progress: Heavy electrical engineering: low temperature cryo-generators in the 2,000 3,000 MW range. Telecommunications transmission by optical fibres. Electrochemicals: air-zinc, sodium-sulphur storage batteries fuel cells. Materials: synthetic resin-based insulators for high-tension power transmission pylons.

Earnings and dividends.

CGE is a public company, founded in 1898, with a capital of $107 million, it has nearly 100,000 shareholders. Its shares are broadly spread among the public, and are quoted on the Pans, American Antiquent Basis Reports Governments.

Générale d'Entreprises), CIT-Alcatel, Compagnie Européenne d'Accumulateurs, SAFT, Compagnie Electro-Financière are also quoted on the Paris Bourse. Net profits of the parent company, 9 CGE, up 13%, amount to $19.6 millions. Consolidated earnings for 1973 : $ 40 million.

Dividend per share in the parent company CGE: $3.9 (to which should be added $1,95 tax credit). Up 12.5 % on 1972 dividend taking into account the one-for-eight free share.

BABE

The Legend Comes to Life By Robert W. Creamer, 443 pp. Illustrated. Simon & Schus

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

IN my most rabid baseball-rooting days, I found Babe Ruth a bore. I read books about Ty Cobb and Walter Johnson. I choked back sobs watching Gary Cooper play Lou Gehrig in "Pride of the Yankees." I wondered whatever had become of men like Jimmy Foxx, Honus Wagner and Mordecai (Three Finger) Brown. But Babe Ruth seemed a bore. Maybe he wasn't real to me. the mythology having overwhelmed the man by the time I got around to him. Perhaps I identified him with my parents' generation and found him too heavy to bear. Whatever the reason, I didn't care about him. I associate his death with a rainy August afternoon in 1948, when the summer camp I was attending took us into town to see a silly movie called "The Babe Ruth Story," starring an even sillier William Bendix. I did not feel sad.

Now we are in the midst of a Babe Ruth revival of sorts, brought on no doubt by Henry Aaron's successful assault on Ruth's home-run record. Books have been appearing about the Babe and his times, among them "Babe Ruth's America," by Robert Smith: "Babe Ruth & the American Dream," by Ken Sobol, "The Greatest of All: The 1927 New York Yankees," by John Mose-dale; and "Babe Ruth: His Life and Legend," by Kal Wagenheim. The best of these books, Robert W. Creamer's "Babe: The Legend Comes to Life," did for me exactly what its subtitle promises: It reduced the mythological Ruth to the scale of a human being; it made clear to me what all the fuss was about.

It is not so much that Mr. Creamer has illuminated the nonlegendary Babe Ruth—the boy who was born into a reasonably solid lower-middle-class family and who was committed by his parents to St. Mary's Industrial School for reasons not even Mr. Creamer's careful scholarship can determine; the young man who became such a competent tailor at St. Mary's that he continued to turn his own shirt collars even after he could afford to buy his $30 Sulkas by the barrel, and the adult who apparently could speak German and was once discovered by a teammate weeping hitterly over his (temporary) inability to "service" two prostitutes.

Nor is it that Mr. Creamer has clarified so many details of the legend-determined, for instance, that Leo Durocher never did snitch the Babe's wristwatch Ruth only thought he did after Durocher was kind enough to help him get undressed for bed after a night of heavy drinking); suggested th at although there were a number of occasions when Ruth did announce a home run in advance, his famous gesture during the 1932 World Series with the Chicago Cubs was : ply to indicate that he still a third strike to swing at; concluded that although notorious 1925 "bellyache be 'round the world" could a ceivably have been caused venereal disease, careful sif of the evidence seems to p to an intestinal abscess broa on by long-term abuse of digestive tract (not the suc consumption of too many dogs). No, it is not so much Creamer's patient, graceful sc arship that brings Babe R back to life—nor even his fa nating "kaleidoscopic" chapter Ruth's personality, in which author even goes so far as investigate the noisiness of Ru lovemaking. It is the care ; which all the facts are pictogether and the heighte drama that unfolds as a re-Seeing the entire story told precisely makes one realize extraordinary Ruth's early car" must have been-when as a r boned, paunchless young ath with the Boston Red Sox he came a better pitcher than e Walter Johnson was.

Does Ruth come off as an pealing man? Amazingly enou he really does. It's hard to plain why—phrases like "innoc animal" and "big-hearted ch have long since lost their c rency and no single aneco quite serves to catch his pers ality. Yet one glimpses in the pages a creature one can und stand and care for. And w he finally breathes his last, w: ed away by a terminal car he was never told about guessed at nonetheless (" termites have got me," he ! a visitor near the end). I for myself . . . well, choking b the lump in the throat that fal

BRIDGE.

By Alan Trusce

A long shot for the contract is usually better than no shot at all. It would not be true to say "always," a dangerous word in a bridge context, since the long shot may involve a risk of an increased penalty. A player who can escape for a 200-point penalty in four spades doubled should not try for a miraculous ten tricks and a score of 790 if the likely result is down three and minus 800.

But on the diagramed deal, reported in the French magazine Le Bridgeur, South was right to try for a long shot. But it was not easy to see that there was any chance at all, and many players would simply abandon

The hand was shown as a playing test, and the bidding is not relevant. In the auction shown both South and North make questionable actions—Son by overcalling with a feeble suit, and North by leaping precipitatedly to a game in diamonds.

By crowding the auction, North hoped to create problems for the opponents if they had a good fit in clubs or hearts, but all he succeeded in doing was putting his partner into a "hopeless" contract.

If West had led his partner's suit, all would have been well for the defense. But he chose to lead the spade jack and South won with the ace. He was doomed to lose two trump tricks, and there was no apparent way to avoid a club loser.

The only chance was to esta lish a heart winner in the clo hand, and this could be d in one unlikely circumsta that one defender held exact three hearts including the qui and jack, or a queen-jack dout

Making this assumption, Sor

Standing in the coach's box at is flushed. third base regarding his navel, Bob Skinner lifted his eyes at 3:05 p.m. yesterday and recognized the lean, clean-shaven features of Paul Popovich, a part-time infielder and pinch-batter with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"Well." said Skinner, a gregarious soul, "It's nice to see you." The playoff for the National League pennant was in the seventh inning of game No. 2 and Popovich was the first Pittsburgh base runner to reach Skinner's sector since last Wednesday. Moments later, Popovich scored, to be followed on the next play by Gene Clines. Skinner may not have that much company again The champions of the National League East surprised and pleased themselves and 49,247 witnesses by making two runs against the Los Angeles Dodgers yesterday and thus achieving a lie that endured for several minutes. In the eighth the first five Dodger batters hit safely, three got home, and Los Angeles won yawning, 5-2. This left the Pirates two games down and one defeat away from the quail season. If they can play baseball in Los Angeles tomorrow the way they played here Saturday and yesterday, they'll

To be sure, they can still qualify for the World Series by winning three straight in Chavez Ravin but the only seer now willing to prophesy such a development is Danny Murtaugh, Pittsburgh's indomitable manager. At least, scholars proficient at unscrambling mixed metaphors interpreted Danny's postgame pronunciamento What he said was: "We've had our backs to the wall nine or 10 times this year but don't count us out, don't give up the ship."

If the Pirates were playing now as they did through the latter half of the season, their immediate future might not look quite so bleak. But the only resemblance between these postseason losers and the muscular crew that came charging from last place to first in the Eastern Division is the color of their uniforms.

Through the summer they led both major leagues in unrefined brutality at bat. Saturday, these carnivori managed four singles and no runs against Don Sutton. After six innings yesterday they had five singles and no runs against Andy Messersmith.

This was one inning short of their 1974 record for pusilianimity. They never suffered two straight shutouts this year, but on June 4 the Dodgers held them scoreless and the next day they didn't get a run until the eighth inning. Then they scored twice in a losing cause, as they did in the seventh yesterday.

On June 6 the Dodgers shut them out again. Doug Rau is the Los Angeles pitcher chosen to help history repeat herself to-

The servility of his wrecking crew saddens Murtaugh, and it makes the Dodgers' Mike Marshall restless as a can of worms. Marshall, prize bull in Walter Alston's bullpen, can't abide idleness. Even in the off-season when he is working for his PhD in physical psychology at Michigan logical psychology at Michigan State—he has also taught kinesiology there, which as any ballplayer knows is the study of the principles of mechanics and anatomy in relation to human movement-he jogs four miles a day and throws enough to keep his pitching muscles limber.

Although he made an unheard-of 106 appearances in relief during the season, he had not worked in a game since last Tuesday, so on Thursday he siphoned off his pent-up energy by pitching to the Dodgers in batting practice, Even so, he was snorting and pawing the earth by the eighth inning yesterday, and if Alston a pinch-hitter in that inning he might have become violent.

Called in for the bottom of the eighth, he disposed of Dave Parker, Manny Sanguillen and Ed Kirkpatrick with almost contemptuous ease. In the ninth he broke into a run leaving the dugout, retired Popovich, Clines and Rennie Stennett with swift dispatch and strode off-probably to go work out in a gym.

The 7-foot-2-inch center suffered a fractured bone-the fourth metacarpal-in his right hand Saturday night while the Bucks were defeating the Boston Celtics, 112-98, in Buffalo in an exhibition

After being scratched on the left eyeball by Don Nelson of the Celtics in a rebounding melee, Abdul-Jabbar punched the support pole of the backboard in frustration and suffered the fracture between the knuckle and wrist below the ring finger. "We don't think it's panic time," said Wayne Embry, the Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was fitted waukee yesterday after his giant center was fitted with the cast and an eye patch at Elmbrook Hospital.

"We figure Kareem will be out for seven or eight games on the regular schedule. Cornell Warner and Terry Driscoll will be our centers and Dick Cunningham is expected to start working out on Friday." Cunningham, 6-10, was Milwaukee's reserve center for the last two seasons. But he underwent an ankle operation last December from which he has still not completely recovered. "We'll probably get a lot of phone calls now from guys who want to play center for us," said Embry. "Like during the playoffs last spring when Lucius Allen was injured. We must have received more than 100 calls from out-of-work guards."

When he was reminded he promised last fall that General Chrysford would devote its efforts to the production of small cars that would not consume so much gasoline, Ringold replied, "No one is going to tell us what kind of automobiles to make. The profits are in the large cars, and that's what the public wants. When America wants small cars, we'll make them. If it wasn't for the environmental nuts, there would be more than enough gasoline for everybody."

Gaylord Frather, the advertising account executive for Windfall of New Mexico Gasoline Co., is still turning out copy, but the conservation campaign has been abandoned. "Since our business is selling gasolme, it's counterproductive to ask people to use less of it. Sure, it didn't hurt last year to say we were worried about future fuel supplies and we were doing everything to see that America would never have to do without. But I'll tell you one thing, the campaign didn't sell a gallon of gas. If anything, it scared people, and they didn't care what brand of gasoline they bought. So we said the hell with it—the company has to come

Rep. Gunther Zilch, who led the fight for energy conservation last February, is not sure wheth-er he's for it now. "This is an election year." Zilch told me, "and it's hardly the time to ask people to make sacrifices. Heaven knows the voter has enough to worry about without asking him to give up the comforts of home and went over to the Department of Transportation and spoke to one of the top officials. "Last year you people said you were going to have a crash program in mass urban transportation so people would use buses and trains again instead of private cars. Are you still going ahead with it? He replied, 'Yes, we're doing a study on it right now, and it should be ready by 1985."

Prof. Heinrich Applebaum, who last year predicted that shale oil would solve all our problems for the next 500 years, now has doubts about it, "That stuff is really hard," Applebaum said. "I mean, squeezing oil out of a rock is some stupid way of getting fuel. Anyone who thinks we're going to solve our energy problems with shale oil in the near future is off his rocker. I don't know why the press takes people like me seriously."

Mysterious 4 Days In October, 1849

By Francis Steegmuller

NEW YORK—We learned recently in the press that President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France studies Flanbert and Manpassant and is "fascinated by the question" whether "Manpassant was not only Flanbert's pupil but also his son."

Without wishing to endorse Mark Twain's "Tis a wise

Frenchman that knows his own father," a biographer of French literary men, such as myself, cannot help being struck by the frequency with which Gallic paternity is questioned even when grounds for doubt have to be invented.

Delacroix's paternity is ascribed to Talleyrand; there exist vague, unconvincing listings of Maupassant's own illegitimate children; Apollinaire's paternity really is in doubt-no one can be sure that his father was the Italian Army officer with the sonorous name Francesco Flugi d'Aspermont; and several illegitimacy stories are current about Jean Cocteau, one of them, making his father an Arab or a Hindu, based purely on Cocteau's cast of countenance and the fact that he had an uncle in the

As for the Flaubert-Maupassant story, it has been "literary" gossip since before the turn of the century, originating, as Mr. Giscard d'Estaing undoubtedly knows, in an item in the "Journal" of the Goncourt brothers under the date of Oct. 1, 1893. The facts are these:

In his youth Flaubert was a close friend of a family, Norman like his own, named LePoittevin. (Madame Flaubert mère and Madame LePoittevin had gone to school together.) Flaubert's particular friend was the LePolttevins' son, Alfred, but he was also friendly with Alfred's sister, Laure, who in 1846 married Gustave de Maupassant. The elder of the Maupassants' two sons, Guy, the future writer, was born Aug. 5,

The Gustave de Maurassants, though living much of the year in Normandy, are said to have spent their winters in Paris. They may possibly have been there during the period Oct. 25 to 29, 1849, when Gustave Flaubert, then aged 28, was briefly in the city, preparing for a long tour of "the Orient" (what we now call the Middle East).

At that time Flaubert was enjoying a remission from the epilepsy which sometimes afflicted him. On Oct. 29 he left sailing from Marseilles for Egypt on Nov. 4 and not returning to France until June 1851. The "chronological" basis for the possibility of Flaubert's paternity thus rests on those few days in October, 1849—a reckoning so close as to have its absurd side, but not as to be totally inconceivable, to use an apposite word. During those strenuous October days, Flaubert kept a detailed diary, which speaks of visits to prostitutes, and wrote at least once a day to his mother in Normandy. Neither in the diary nor in the letters is there mention of Laure, whom they knew so well; nor is she mentioned in the memoirs, very detailed concerning Flaubert's activities those days, of Flaubert's travel companion, Maxime Du Camp, with whom Flaubert stayed

No indication that Flaubert saw Laure de Maupassant during that time; no evidence that she was even in Paris. No slightest doubt subsequently cast by Gustave de Maupassant on the legitimacy of his son Guy; nor by the famous son

The item in the Goncourt "Journal," written several months after Maupassant's death, is an account by the writer Paul Alexis of a conversation he had recently had with Laure de Maupassant, whose marriage had long been unhappy, who had survived her sons, and was living in the south of France.

According to Alexis, Laure "showed a certain animation in assuring him that physically and mentally Manpassant resembled his father [Gustave de Manpassant] not at all," and that he had not inherited his "illness" (Maupassant had died insane as the result of sychilis) from either her or her husband; and Alexis also reported that Laure, in what he interpreted not as a slip of the tongue but as a precision, spoke of Maupassant's having "managed the details of his dear father's-I mean poor Flaubert's-funeral"

From those various words of Laure's Alexis wondered whether it wasn't Flaubert who was responsible for Manpassant's insunity, having "bequeathed him his epilepsy in that a guileless reference to paresis.

Probably the best comment on the matter is that of Robert Rigatte, the editor of the definitive edition of the Goncourt "Journal" published in the 1950s.

"Paul Alexis's account is grist to the mill of those who would like Maupassant to be Flaubert's son . . . But after Laure LePoittevin's marriage Flaubert seems to have been out of touch with her until 1863, when they began a correspondence whose tone undermines belief in any earlier haison. The dates of Manpassant's birth and that of Flaubert's departure for the Orient do not constitute an absolutely irrefutable objection, but the tone of the Flaubert-Laure de Maupassant correspondence is an objection, a serious one. The was not until 1867, when Flaubert was 56 and Maupassant 17, that the two met. Maupassant quickly became Flaubert's precocious literary pupil, remained his friend, and did manage the details of Flaubert's funeral when he died in 1881.

Twelve years later came Laure de Maupessant's precision or slip of the tongue. And since then "students" of Flaubert and Maupassant like Mr. Giscard d'Estaing have been "fascinated" by what might have happened during four days in

PEOPLE: A Jogging Lobbyist Annoys a Senator

A Pan American World Airways pilot waylaid Sen, William Proxmire, D. Wis, while the senator was jogging to his office in Washington and made a plea for government aid to the financially troubled sirline. The incident occame to light in a conversation between Proxmire and a reporter

Sunday. "I must say I was a little annoyed that the guy was so persistent," Proximire said. "The first time we ran all the way from my home to my office. But the next day I saw him waiting for me again so I changed my route to avoid him. I had to go miles out of my way-logged seven miles instead of five. "On the third day, the guy was waiting for me outside the Secate

Office Building. I told him they were overdoing it and hurting their own cause." Proximire said that he was against a government subsidy and the jogging lobbyist had not changed his mind. His office identifed the pilot as R.T.
